BALLANTINE'S

The world's second most sold whisky dates back to 1827, when farmer's son George Ballantine opened a shop in Edinburgh and began supplying whisky to customers. He later created his own blends and brought his two sons into the business. Although the prosperous family business was sold in 1919, its new owners kept the name Ballantine's as an established brand of the highest quality.

Ballantine's

BALLANTINE'S FINEST

A sophisticated blend of carefully selected whiskies, all matured for at least 3 years. It has a heather honey aroma with hints of spice and a light gold colour. Its delicious, smoky, slightly sweet flavour suiting the modern style is best consumed straight. Also popular on ice or as a long drink, e.g. with cola. 40% ABV.

SINGLE MALT SCOTCH WHISKY

Straight single malt whisky comes from a single distillery and is not blended with whisky from others. It is made exclusively from barley malt. Its characteristic flavour comes from ageing in oak bourbon, sherry or wine barrels. It is usually over 5 years old and is stronger and more aromatic.

THE GLENLIVET

This Scottish distillery owes part of its fame to its founder George Smith. In 1824, he became the first of many to register his originally illegal distillery for legalisation after a law was passed in 1823. Its whiskies have a fruity flavour and explosive finish. Part of the production is used for the best blended whiskies.

THE GLENLIVET FOUNDER'S RESERVE

This novelty in the Glenlivet portfolio, created to honour founder George Smith, has a typically fruity flavour. Its excellence is due partly to ageing in so-called white oak American first-fill casks – never previously used to age whisky. This maturation brings a delicate, fruity-cream finish with orange zest and pear tones. 40% ABV.

ABERLOUR

Aberlour, a distillery located in its namesake village in Banffshire, produces Scotch malt whisky. It was founded by James Fleming in 1879. Aberlour (“the mouth of the chattering burn” in Gaelic), probably relates to local St. Drostan spring which, though pictured on Aberlour’s labels, is not its source of water. Around half of the production is sold as single malt, with the rest used to produce blended Clan Campbell, belonging to the company.

ABERLOUR 12 YO

Rich, spicy and enticingly sweet – such is the official description of this delicious whisky. The water used is soft and contributes to the delicate central body. Its citrus character is not suppressed, but perfectly complemented and enriched from maturation in bourbon and Oloroso sherry casks, providing its fruitiness and deep flavour. 40% ABV.

Irish whiskey from the Midleton distillery is triple-distilled and very delicate. Unlike Scotch, it lacks smoke undertones, since local malt-houses do not use peat fires – malt is dried in tightly sealed ovens. Irish whiskey must be distilled in Ireland and matured in oak barrels no larger than 700 l in Irish tax warehouses for at least 3 years.

JAMESON

The world's best-selling Irish whiskey was born in 1780 thanks to distiller John Jameson, and in just 40 years it became the second largest Irish whiskey producer. The distillery was hit twice in the early 1900s – by prohibition in the USA and Irish independence, limiting exports to the British Empire. Jameson, one of 4 distilleries to survive the crisis, joined the Irish Distillers Group in 1966. In 1975, production moved from the original distillery in Dublin to the new Midleton distillery in Cork.

POWERS

Powers was established in Dublin in 1791 by James Power, owner of a roadside inn. 30 years later his son was producing 150,000 litres of whiskey a year, a volume increased tenfold over the following decade. A knighthood was his reward for this commercial success. In 1866, the distillery John Power & Son became one of the first in the world to bottle its whiskey (whiskey was typically sold in barrels). Each bottle bore a gold label, hence the name – Powers Gold Label.

MIDLETON

The old Midleton distillery was converted from a wool factory by the Murphy brothers in the 1820s. Several small local distilleries merged to form the Cork Distillers Company. At the time, the distillery boasted the world's largest still. After merging with Jameson and Powers following the creation of Irish Distillers Group in 1966, 9 years later a new Midleton distillery was built alongside the original, into which production from other IDG distilleries was transferred. Today it produces 90% of Irish made whiskey.

MIDLETON VERY RARE

Production has been strictly limited since 1984 – master distiller Brian Nation personally selects 50 highest-quality bourbon and sherry barrels aged 12-25 years. The most delicate whiskey of its kind, it is a multi-award winning single pot still whiskey dating back to 1903. Made in the Midleton distillery from a blend of malted and unmalted barley, it is triple-distilled in traditional copper pot stills. Unmalted barley, typical for Irish whiskey since the 1700s, and at least 12 years of ageing, mostly in Oloroso sherry barrels, create Redbreast's typical character and exceedingly full taste.

REDBREAST 12 YO

A honey-sweet spicy whiskey, its full flavour and aroma are born from maturation in Spanish Oloroso sherry casks, giving it a complex spicy and fruity aroma with distinct tones of toasted oak and a fruity, creamy, slightly acrid taste with pleasant hints of wood and long, luxurious reverberations in the finish. 40% ABV.

CUBAN RUM

Many famous rums originated in Cuba. Given the large territory, their style cannot be precisely defined – the colonial glory days saw over 1,000 distilleries in Cuba. However, all are made from left-over molasses from sugar production. Cuba was celebrated by rum lover Ernest Hemingway, who enjoyed rum served straight and in various cocktails.

HAVANA CLUB

The world's leading Cuban rum, Havana Club, has embodied the heritage and supremacy of Cuban rum-making since 1800. The name captures Cuban rum-making heritage and Havana's unique atmosphere. The know-how of Maestros Roneros keeps alive the art of "anejamiento": the distilling, ageing and blending of premium rums. Production begins with sugarcane, the main, carefully selected ingredient. The place and length of ageing are crucial. It is generally stored in American white oak bourbon barrels. Closely entwined with Cuban culture, Cubans take pride in this truly national icon.

HAVANA CLUB AÑEJO 3 AÑOS

Light and dry, this is a prestigious white Cuban rum, created by blending mature rums with fresh spirits; it ages in white oak barrels for 3 years. An aroma of caramelised pears and bananas with hints of smoked oak blends with a balanced taste, most apparent in mixed drinks or straight on ice. 40% ABV.

MARTELL

Established by Jean Martell in 1715, Martell is among the oldest Cognac manufacturers, symbolising excellence since its birth. In its 300 years of existence it has been tasted by such figures as George IV, Louis Phillippe d'Orléans, Napoleon III, Alexander III of Russia, Franz Joseph I of Austria and Elizabeth II. Today its cellars conceal the most valuable eaux-de-vie or grape spirits, some dating back to 1830 – used to make the rarest Cognacs.

BRANDY

The name brandy comes from the Dutch word “brandewijn” – burned wine. It is a wine or fruit spirit, dating back to the 1100s, when travelling merchants appreciated its durability. Another reason for its creation was tax – this was paid on a drink’s total volume, which was much smaller for distilled spirits than wine.

ARARAT

Since 1887, an integral part of life for several generations of brandy lovers, ArArAt is the world's most famous and successful brand, bearing the name of the landing site of Noah's ark. The mystical mountain is Armenia's most famous symbol. It is also home to one of the world's oldest vineyards. The Yerevan Brandy Company has been producing ArArAt for almost 130 years using a traditional recipe of Armenian white grapes and spring water.

ARARAT 5 YO

VODKA

Vodka was first mentioned in 14th-century Russia. Its name is derived from a word meaning water. The clear beverage with a distinctly alcoholic taste is traditionally made from grain, but base ingredients may be potatoes, sugar beet, grapes or rice. The production process has several phases including fermentation, distillation, filtration and dilution.

ABSOLUT

Although introduced in its current form in 1979, its origins date back to 1879. Now it is the world's second best-selling brand of premium vodka and the fourth largest brand among premium spirits. It is made from winter wheat from southern Sweden using a unique method of continual distillation – it is distilled over 100 times, ensuring its perfect clarity and thus giving rise to its name – absolutely pure vodka. There are numerous other varieties made by mixing Absolut vodka with natural flavours without added sugar.

ABSOLUT ELYX

The texture of the spirit defines the high quality of this vodka, which leaves a pleasant silky sensation in the mouth. The aroma is pure with a hint of anise with herbal and mildly spicy notes. The flavour of the full and natural body is supplemented by tones of macadamia nuts and cereals with a hint of white chocolate and freshly baked bread with a trace of dryness. The angular bottle is decorated with copper plates as a reference to the important role of copper in the production process. 42.3% ABV.

BEEFEATER

Beefeater premium gin is among the few gins still distilled using the original method in London. A traditional representative of the London Dry Gin category, it is strongly linked to English history and tradition. It is made by steeping, i.e. macerating herbs into a grain spirit and the subsequent distillation. Its name comes from beef rationed to guards at the Tower of London – today's fortress housing the crown jewels. Thanks to the experience of master distiller Desmond Payne, the Beefeater Distillery produces a unique spirit with a refreshing citrus character and intense juniper aftertaste.

BEEFEATER 24

A super-premium gin, it is derived from an original 19th-century recipe, based on a 100% grain spirit. Besides 9 basic herbs, it is enriched by Chinese green and Japanese Sencha tea and grapefruit peel, with no added sugar or flavourings. These ingredients create a natural, perfectly balanced spirit with a deep taste and a fine tea intoxication. 45% ABV.

TEQUILA

Tequila is primarily made in the vicinity of Tequila in the Mexican state of Jalisco. The primary raw ingredient is Mexican Agave tequilana, called Weber's Blue Agave. According to Mexican laws, tequila can only be made in five areas. Every bottled is labelled with NOM, which is a trademark of tequila given by the Mexican law, and a number specifying the place where the tequila was made.

OLMECCA

Olmeca brand tequilas are made at 2100 m above sea level in one of the 31 states of Mexico – in Jalisco, in the region of Los Altos.

This region is renowned for red, rich in mineral soil, where Blue Agave, from which excellent tequila is made, grows best. Olmecca gets its unique premium flavour by thoroughly adhering to the strictest rules at all phases of its production. It is exported to more than 80 countries worldwide.

OLMECA BLANCO

Olmeca Blanco is made of Blue Agave by means of a special process, which emphasises its exceptional purity. The aroma of green pepper with herbal tones has a fine, lemon finish. The flavour is sweet with a fine touch of smokiness and notes of honey. It is either drunk straight with lemon and salt or used in cocktails – the most popular are the Tequila Sunrise and Margarita. 38% ABV.

ABSINTH

Absinth is an herbal liquor with a high 50 to 80% alcohol content. The basic ingredient is the so-called “holy trinity” of herbs, i.e. wormwood (Artemisia absinthium), anise and fennel. It is produced by macerating herbs in alcohol, giving it its typically green colour. For most of the 20th century, Absinth was banned in the USA and almost all of Europe for its alleged harmfulness.

PERNOD ABSINTHE

The brand's founder was Henri-Louis Pernod, who began commercially producing absinthe in 1797. At that time absinthe was one of the most popular alcoholic beverages, particularly among artists, poets and intellectuals. In 1805 Pernod moved to Pontarlier in France to offer the product on the French market; he called the distillery La Maison Pernod Fils and possessed one distilling machine with a daily production of 16 litres. After years of bans, Pernod Absinthe is once again produced following a recipe found in a 19th-century manuscript, using traditional processes without sugar according to legislation. Today the brand occupies a leading position in global absinthe production.

PERNOD ABSINTHE

This redistillate – i.e. a distilled distillate – is based on an original recipe. The base is a wine distillate, in which wormwood from Pontarlier and green anise are macerated. After further distillation, star anise, melissa, wormwood, hyssop and other secret herbs are macerated, giving the drink its wonderfully bright green colour. The palate is fine, fresh and complex. 68% ABV.

BITTER HERBAL LIQUEURS

Bitters are prepared by macerating herbs in alcohol, creating a bitter or bittersweet flavour. Many famous examples were originally developed to cure various ailments, but became so popular that they are now enjoyed as aperitifs or as digestifs after meals.

JAN BECHER PORTFOLIO

The portfolio of Karlovy Vary herbal liqueurs is dominated by Becherovka Original, which turned 200 in 2007. It is exported to over 40 countries. In 1807, creator Josef Vitus Becher (1769–1840) began sales in the shop The Three Skylarks, originally under the name English Becher Bitter as digestive drops. Exports began later in the 1800s. During socialism in Czechoslovakia, it was among the most successful exports. For its 100% natural ingredients and inimitable flavour, today Becherovka is popular worldwide. Premium liqueur Cordial and aperitif KV 14 are also made in Karlovy Vary. In 2008, Becherovka Lemond appeared.
